

When people experience oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.

Point When people experience political oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Point 2 When people experience natural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Point 2 When people experience cultural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.
Context Paul Atreides was inviting the emperor to talk with him about how he had just won the war. They were in a grand hall in a big house full of people and guards.	Context 2 After escaping Kynes' office, Paul was in his ship and was being pursued by Harkonnen ships	Context 3 Paul is in a big cavern filled with fremen who want Paul to kill Stilgar after they had captured the Sardaukar.
Support He was explaining why he had done some illegal activities. "It was in my way and I was in a hurry to get to you, Majesty, to ask your explanation for some of your strange activities" (772).	Support 2 Paul was deciding to go into the storm to escape from the Harkonnen ships. "Through Jessica's mind flashed all the warnings about these storms- that they cut metal like butter" (369)	Support 3 Paul was giving a passionate speech to the Fremen crowd. "Who is there to say that I'm not the rightful ruler.... Must I prove it by leaving every Fremen tribe without a leader?" (695). Paul had to go against their culture for the better of the Fremen and not kill Stilgar.
Explanation The Emperor was trying to regain control over the Atreides house by oppressing Paul. Paul had already won the war so he had to make a balanced decision. If he had taken the throne by force from the Emperor, chaos would erupt and he would not have been a great leader. So Paul respectfully pointed out that the Emperor, had broken some of his own laws to gain more power.	Explanation 2 When Jessica says that the storms cut metal like butter, she is referring to the oppressive conditions of the planet Arrakis. Then Paul has to decide whether to go into the storm or face the Harkonnens. If he faces the Harkonnens, he will die and he will lose the war which will lead to the downfall of the planet. But if he faces the storm, he at least has a slim chance to survive using his natural abilities and become a superior leader.	Explanation 3 When Paul delivered that speech, he was going against the Fremen culture which was being followed by millions of Fremen. He had to take a risk knowing that the cultural oppression could decrease the support from the Fremen which helped him become a better leader. Without the support of the Fremen, the war would be very hard to win and the Fremen would continue to be mistreated by the Harkonnens.
Transition	Transition 2	Transition 3

When people experience oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.

Point. When people experience political oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Point 2 When people experience natural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Point 2 When people experience cultural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.
Context Kynes and Paul were in Kynes' office right before the Harkonnen raid where Kynes was captured.	Context 2 Paul and his mother were stranded in the desert after their ship crashed.	Context 3 Paul had just beat Jamis in a dual at the fremen sietch and was learning about the Fremen culture.
Support They were strategizing about how to win back the planet Arrakis. "Could your Fremen provide me with proof positive that the Sardaukar are here in Harkonnen uniform?" (359)	Support 2 They needed to get across a big stretch of desert without attracting a worm. "'There's a way to get safely across that open sand' Paul said 'The Fremen do it'" (399).	Support 3 Paul was questioning why he had to kill Jamis. "I see. Our ways are different, but you'll see the sense in them" (496). And he found out that killing people was in the Fremen culture.
Explanation Paul was gathering information to find the best way to lead the Fremen to victory. He had to make balanced decisions that would work for him, and the Fremen, but that would not cause chaos to erupt. But the Emperor is oppressing them by sending out Sardaukar to help the Harkonnens defeat them. He is also interfering with the Harkonnen/Atreides war and taking the Harkonnen side.	Explanation 2 Paul must make a decision and look for an answer to how the Fremen cross the desert without attracting the worms. If he does not attempt to cross the desert, he will either die from the oppressive desert conditions, or get caught by the Harkonnens. But if he crosses the desert to the fremen sietch, he could meet up with them and lead them to victory in the war.	Explanation 3 Stilgar pointed out the cultural differences in the Fremen culture which were new to Paul. Paul considered them culturally oppressive even though the Fremen found it natural. He had to make the decision to kill Jamis even though he did not want to. If he had not killed him, the Fremen would have thought of him as an outcast and would never have accepted him as their leader.
Wrap Up When people experience political oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Wrap up 2 When people experience natural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Wrap up 3 When people experience cultural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.

When people experience oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.

Point When people experience political oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Point 2 When people experience natural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Point 2 When people experience cultural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.
Support He was explaining why he had done some illegal activities. "It was in my way and I was in a hurry to get to you, Majesty, to ask your explanation for some of your strange activities" (772).	Support 2 Paul was deciding to go into the storm to escape from the Harkonnen ships. "Through Jessica's mind flashed all the warnings about these storms- that they cut metal like butter" (369)	Support 3 Paul was giving a passionate speech to the Fremen crowd. "Who is there to say that I'm not the rightful ruler.... Must I prove it by leaving every Fremen tribe without a leader?" (695). Paul had to go against their culture for the better of the Fremen and not kill Stilgar.
Point. When people experience political oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Point 2 When people experience natural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Point 2 When people experience cultural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.
Support They were strategizing about how to win back the planet Arrakis. "Could your Fremen provide me with proof positive that the Sardaukar are here in Harkonnen uniform?" (359)	Support 2 They needed to get across a big stretch of desert without attracting a worm. "There's a way to get safely across that open sand' Paul said 'The Fremen do it'" (399).	Support 3 Paul was questioning why he had to kill Jamis. "I see. Our ways are different, but you'll see the sense in them" (496). And he found out that killing people was in the Fremen culture.
Wrap Up When people experience political oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Wrap up 2 When people experience natural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.	Wrap up 3 When people experience cultural oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.

When people experience oppressive conditions in war, they should develop into a superior leader through balanced decisions.